The Church of the People.

THE SALVATION ARMY is the evolution of two great ideas—first, that of reaching with the gospel of salvation the masses who are outside the pale of ordinary church influences; second, that of caring for their temporal as well as spiritual necessities. In the one hand, it has carried to the people the Bread of Life, while in the other it has borne to them the bread that perisheth.

In July, 1865, the banner of this Army of Redemption was first unfurled in the East End of London, in a disused Quaker burial ground, by its founder and general, William Booth. In 1872 the first shot was fired on American soil by one of its converts, an emigrant from England, and in 1881 the work was regularly inaugurated by a band of Hallelujah Lassies under the leadership of Commissioner George Scott Railton.

If it were possible to put into figures the sum total of the indirect influence of the Salvation Army on religious thought and sociological progress, and could we add to this its direct and visible accomplishments, the result would indeed be startling. Apart altogether from the latter, there can be no doubt that an immense impetus has been given to the cause of Christ and philanthropy by stirring up thousands who have never entered its ranks to work of a similar character. Not only so, but a very large proportion of its converts have joined the churches and thousands of those who have been trained in its ranks are now occupying prominent ministerial and similar positions.

It is, however, with its direct operations that we are at the moment concerned, and these we have endeavored to describe as far as possible pictorially, with a view to presenting the subject in as concise and interesting a manner as possible.

The Salvation Army
incorporated as an American Institution.

THE INCORPORATION of The Salvation Army in America under the laws of the State of New York places an official imprimatur on its organization and methods. Under this charter The Salvation Army becomes a legal entity and takes its place among the national institutions of the country.

The military system of its government, so essential to its success, remains unchanged, and at the same time ample powers are provided for the prosecution of the various branches of its religious and philanthropic work.

In preferring to incorporate under the laws of the State of New York, which are noted for their strictness, rather than under those of some other State where more latitude is allowed, it was believed that greater confidence would be created in the Army's stability and in the national character of its organization.

Nothing could have been more cordial than the reception granted to the Army's representatives by the members of the Legislature. The good work already accomplished was generously recognized by all parties, who united in facilitating the passage of the Act, and in exempting from taxation both our religious and benevolent operations.

The Church of the Churchless.

AMERICA is a country in which the church and the Sunday school flourish as perhaps in no other country in the world; certainly its Sunday scholars outnumber those of any other country. And yet the problem of churchlessness is staring us in the face year by year with increasing seriousness.

The census of 1890 showed that church accommodation had been provided for 43,000,000 out of a total population of 60,000,000. This was an admirable proportion. But the fact cannot be denied that more than half the places of worship are thinly attended. It would be a generous allowance to say that 30,000,000 persons regularly availed themselves of the opportunity afforded. In other words, excluding infants, more than 20,000,000 persons habitually absent themselves from places of worship.

Go into the streets of any large city at the hour when every church throws open its door, and compare the number of people in the streets and parks with those who are at worship and it will be found that they number at least two to one.

Again, look at the religious census of our cities. Here is one with a population of 25,000. Its churches contain accommodation for about 5,000 (including Catholics and Jews). The majority of the churches are not more than half full—only a few of them being popular and crowded. The ministers will tell you they have no need of more churches; in fact, they dread the erection of a new building. And yet here are 20,000 persons who are neither provided for nor evince any desire to be so.

In the light of the above facts the extreme importance of the Army as a religious factor in our national life cannot fail to be recognized. Not only do tens of thousands of habitual neglecters of the ordinary means of grace make our services the only ones they ever attend, but we follow them to their open-air resorts, and by means of our street parades, music and open-air meetings, we bring the good news of salvation to their very doorsteps.

The spiritual operations of the Army in the United States include

667 Senior Corps or Posts,
545 Junior Corps or Posts,
21 Slum Posts,
27 Outposts.

At these centres upwards of 12,000 meetings are held weekly, between two and three million people being reached in the open air and indoors. From 35,000 to 50,000 persons profess conversion publicly every year, amongst them being thousands of drunkards, criminals and other outcasts of society.

It is impossible to exaggerate the value of the moral reformation thus wrought amongst the degenerate classes. Not that the work is by any means confined to them. Indeed, the bulk of our ordinary congregations is made up of the respectable working classes. No effort is, however, spared to induce every convert to go forth to the rescue of others. In fact the words Saint and Soldier are made to be synonymous. No sooner is the sinner saved than he is trained to systematic warfare and taught that his very soul's salvation depends on his becoming the saviour of others.

Dormitory, "Ardmore" Shelter, Bowery, New York City.

Children's Home, San Francisco, Cal.

The Man in the Street.

THE BLUE LAWS of Connecticut and other States show that at one time "the man in the street" was the exception, now he is the rule; or, at least, whereas he represented a small and disreputable minority, now he represents a majority, including many of the most respectable classes. Anyway, he is there and can no longer be ignored. Nor can he be made religious by Act of Legislature.

True, we might leave him to himself and allow him to drift further on the downward course. We might abandon him to his fate. He has left the fold. He has himself to blame. We have many yet within the fold who need our watchful care lest they, too, stray. But that was not the policy advocated by the Good Shepherd. With ninety-nine in the fold, He would bid us seek the one lost sheep. How much more so when half the flock have wandered away!

Will they listen? Oh, yes! The one justifiable ground of complaint that the police sometimes bring against us is that the traffic has been obstructed by the crowds who gather on the sidewalks and roads and listen to the singing and the testimonies of our soldiers in the open air.

Oh, that crowd of soul-hungry, sin-betained faces, the prodigal boys of a thousand homes, that group themselves around the ring wherever the flag of The Salvation Army has been hoisted! They listen because they are talked to by ex-prodigals, who have tasted the bitterness of sin's cup. The tear in the speaker's eye, the tender tones in his or her voice, the song set to the exquisite popular melody which has swayed the nation's heart—how can they fail to awaken a responsive echo in that massive, thoughtful, silent throng?

The anarchist and the burglar stand side by side with the merchant and the working man. The infidel's arguments die upon his lips. "If I were not an agnostic I should say it is Divine," is the testimony of one who voices the feelings of many.

Does the noise distress you? And yet you steel your nerves to the inevitable hurly-burly of a city's traffic. The former takes but one brief hour; the other commences with the dawn and reaches far into the night.

What about the drum? Why not? Thousands owe to it their salvation. Watch the wild boys of your streets running at its sound to catch up to the procession and forgetting their games and amusements while they listen to the gospel! You cannot force them to church with a rod nor attract them with a dollar, but here they come of their own accord and sacrifice their playtime for religion. The drunkard forgets his glass, the gambler his dice and cards.

And yet during the last year, in more than one city, attempts have been made to curtail our open-air liberties. Our very success in drawing together the godless crowds has been the excuse for the passing of ordinances which the Courts have over and over declared to be unconstitutional, and for the arrest of men and women whose only offence has been a passionate desire to win the prodigal and save the lost.

Happily the attempts thus made have been opposed by the united sentiment of the people and have resulted again and again in the vindication of our rights.

The most systematic and daring attack upon these valued rights was made during the past year in Philadelphia, where more than fifty of our officers and soldiers were arrested and in some cases treated with needless violence and indignity by the police. Our cause was ably advocated by ex-State Attorney Gordon and the arrests were declared to be illegal, resulting in a withdrawal of the restrictions which had been placed upon us.

A Sphere for Woman's Work. I N no religious or secular organization is there so free a hand allowed to women as in The Salvation Army, and to this fact is undoubtedly due a large measure of its success. The Hallelujah Lass has from the earliest days of the movement proved herself its Joan of Arc. Into the heart of slumdom she has carried the banner of salvation, and if her bonnet has become an equally familiar sight in the offices of our merchant princes, it is only that she may plead the claims of the poor and champion their cause.

Problems that statesmanship and philanthropy have failed to solve have yielded to the gentle magic of these heroines of slumdom. "If there is a fight we make straight for the centre of it," said one of these girl warriors, who had been born and bred in the lap of luxury and had forsaken a comfortable home and brilliant social prospects in order to minister to the semi-savages of our city jungles. "Even if they are inflamed with drink or are using knives or revolvers, they never touch us. The people would almost tear them to pieces if they did."

"There are only two saloons in Chicago where we are not allowed to visit," said another of these officers, "and we go to them regularly every week. When the proprietor reminds us that he has already forbidden us to come, we answer, 'Yes, sir; but we have come to see whether you have changed your mind yet!'"

Thousands of those who never cross the threshold of a church are to be found night after night in our meetings. Even when they do not profess to be converted, a marked change comes frequently over their lives. The meetings possess for these men a strange fascination, drawing them away from the glittering allurements of the saloons and dives and low music halls.

The personal magnetism of these women, their fearless face-to-face dealing with the wicked and their patient toil in behalf of the suffering poor are not the only secrets of their success. Prayer and faith equip the most timid of them for the platform duties from which they would naturally shrink. "It is so much easier," they say, "to act than to talk." And yet the burning words which fall from their lips, powerful in their simplicity, go straight to the hearts of their hearers and result in wonderful reformations.

As organizers and administrators many of our women officers have proven themselves to be in no sense inferior to the men, and the fact that they are equally eligible for our most responsible offices has helped to draw forth gifts which have only been latent for want of exercise.

Work for the Workless.

IT is sometimes alleged that "any man who wants work can get it." The magistrates and other public officials in the city of Brooklyn were recently asked the direct question as to whether this was so. City Magistrate Jacob Brenner replied as follows:

"I know of many men who are honest, sober and industrious, willing to work at anything and for any wages, who cannot find any employment. As a last resort many of these men, who are homeless, without shelter or food, apply at the Courts and are committed, often at their own request, to the County Jail, and even to the Penitentiary."

The above statement was endorsed by the following city magistrates: Henry Bristow, Charles E. Teale, William Kramer, Andrew Lemon, Alfred Steers and J. Lott Nostrand. Judge Teale says emphatically:

"It is not true that 'any man who wants it can get work,' and I know whereof I speak. There are hundreds of men, habits good, physically equipped for the hardest kind of work, willing to the point of anxiety to pitch into work without raising the question of compensation, who cannot obtain employment at any price. . . . The city magistrates, as a preventative and not a remedy or punishment, must take the very broadest humanitarian view and commit such unfortunates where at least soul and body may be kept alive."

The above opinions are endorsed by Deputy Chief of Police John MacKellar, by Chief Engineer C. C. Martin, and by Patrick Hayes, Warden of Kings County Penitentiary. The last of these gentlemen, who is absolutely in a position to know the actual facts, says:

"Men are constantly being committed here in large numbers who have been charged with no crime. Over fifty per cent. of the commitments to this institution are for vagrancy—the crime (?) of being 'out of work and homeless.' . . . By our treatment of the unemployed we are making criminals of men who have heretofore been honest, self-sustaining members of the community, and who would be so again could they obtain work."

The above statements are further confirmed by the returns of the labor unions for the State of New York. These show that during one of the most prosperous quarters ever reported upon, ten per cent. of their members had been out of work. If such was the proportion amongst the powerful organizations represented, it is easy to imagine how great must be the suffering among the masses of unorganized labor.

In a single month during the past year The Salvation Army found employment in the United States for 4,780 of these workless persons, being at the rate of nearly 60,000 per annum.

With a view to providing work for the unemployed we have now eight Labor Bureaux and nineteen Salvage Brigades, Woodyards and Workshops. In addition to this, each of our Corps and Social Institutions is practically a Labor Bureau by means of which thousands of persons are annually found employment.

Our Salvage Brigades.

ONE of our most interesting and novel plans for finding work for the unemployed is the Salvage Brigade. This consists in the collection of waste paper, lumber, furniture, rags and clothing. The sale of these articles almost covers the cost of their collection and provides a large amount of unskilled labor which tides men over until they are able to find some regular employment. In the city of Chicago we have a contract for keeping several of the wards clear of waste paper. In some cities baskets are deposited with householders, our teams calling regularly to remove whatever articles may be placed in them.

The one difficulty that confronts us in extending this interesting and suitable method for dealing with the unemployed is that considerable expense is connected with the purchase of teams and baskets.

Salvation Junk Shops.

CONNECTED with some of our Salvage Brigades are Junk Shops where the old clothing, shoes and furniture we collect are repaired and sold to the poor at a low price. By this means quantities of cheap clothing are supplied at a nominal figure sufficient to cover working expenses, and at the same time avoiding the appearance of charity.

Shelters for Working Men
and Working Women.

“WE could manage pretty well without food,” said a converted hobo to me one day. “We became accustomed to the gnawings of hunger. But it was the awful longing for sleep that we could not endure. At first they would allow us to spend the night in the empty wagons and freight cars. That was bad enough. Many a morning have I woke up to find myself lying in a pool of water, drenched through to the skin, yet so exhausted that I had slept through it all.

“But after a time the police received orders to prevent us from using the carts or even the doorsteps. All night we would be compelled to keep moving. The longing for sleep at such times would be terrible. How thankful would we be to hide away in the corner of a lumber yard where the police could not find us!”

Our Shelters for the homeless poor have been greatly appreciated. Here, for ten cents a night, or for its equivalent in work, we have been able nightly to harbor thousands of destitute persons as well as to provide a clean and comfortable resting place for the multitudes of working men whose employment is irregular and whose wages are low.

The majority of these Shelters are on a self-supporting basis, the chief difficulty being the initial expenses for fitting up and starting them.

There are now forty-seven Shelters for men, with accommodation for about 4,800, and three for women, with accommodation for about 200.

Very interesting figures were obtained by officers relating to the nationality of visitors to a Salvation Army Shelter on the Bowery in New York. It was found on that particular night there were in the Shelter,

91 men of American birth,
14 German,
12 Irish,
8 English,
5 Swiss,

2 Swedish,
2 Scotch,
1 Austrian,
1 Canadian.

Blizzards
and Winter Relief.

IN ADDITION to the regular and systematic relief of poverty by means of its various institutions, The Salvation Army is able to render special service at times of great emergency. During the prolonged blizzard of 1899, when for nearly a fortnight the railroads were tied up and the streets were for some time impassable through the heavy falls of snow, some hundreds of our halls throughout the country were thrown open to the poor by day and night. This was the more necessary as it was impossible for many families who buy their fuel in small quantities to obtain any supply. Thousands availed themselves of this relief.

Cent meals for the poor have also been a very popular form of assistance. For one cent a pint of coffee and some bread have been supplied. A single member of a family could come and fetch what might be required for a good meal at home, taking away as many cent meals as they might pay for. This form of relief continued throughout the winter, and has already been re-established this winter.

Our Christmas
Poor.

DURING last Christmas we spread our tables throughout the United States for no less than 100,000 of our city poor. Next Christmas this vast number will probably be exceeded. As a rule, the free distribution of food or clothing is discountenanced by us. The poor man must either work or pay for whatever he receives. Nor do we find the slightest reluctance on the part of the poor to fall in line with this reasonable request. We feel, however, that Christmas is the one exception which must serve to prove the rule. On this occasion our doors are thrown wide open and we welcome all who come.

Past experience having shown us that the most needy and deserving are often those who seek to conceal their destitution and are unwilling to parade it before the public, we have made one of our special features of Christmas Relief the distribution of Basket Dinners, each basket containing sufficient for five persons. These are taken away by some member of the family and provide a good Christmas at home, which is deeply appreciated.

Tickets for these basket dinners, as well as for the general public dinners, are carefully distributed through our officers and through the various religious and philanthropic agencies, so that the really needy poor are reached and helped.

For our next Christmas Dinner in New York the famous Madison Square Garden has been engaged. Basket dinners will be prepared for 16,000 and a general public dinner for 4,000. A mammoth Christmas Tree for children will also be provided on the Saturday previous to Christmas Day at our Memorial Hall in West Fourteenth Street.

The following are among those who have consented to act as Vice-Presidents and Patrons of the occasion: Commissioner John W. Kellar, President Board of Charities; Edward Lauterbach, Esq., Counsellor-at-Law; Hon. Chas. F. MacLean, Justice of the Supreme Court; General Jas. O'Beirne, former Commissioner of Charities; Countess Schimmelmänn; Hon. Bernard J. York, President Board of Police Commissioners, Greater New York.

Similar celebrations will take place throughout the country in all the principal cities. In Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland and many other cities from 4,000 to 5,000 persons are annually provided with Christmas cheer.

Our
for Fallen Women.

DOTTED up and down the leading cities of the world The Salvation Army operates nearly one hundred Rescue Homes for Fallen Women. During the twelve months ending 30th June, 1899, 5,132 of these daughters of sorrow passed through our Homes, from 70 to 85 per cent. of them being restored to lives of virtue.

In the United States we have now fourteen Homes, with accommodation for 360 girls, about 1,000 having passed through during the year, including preventive cases and some who only remained for a few days.

An interesting feature of this work is the organization of the girls who have left the Homes into a league known as the "Out of Loves." Occasional meetings are held for them at regular intervals, and they contribute as they are able to the expenses of the Home. One or two of the older Homes are now mainly supported by the contributions of the "Out of Loves."

Rescue Home, Boston, Mass.

Work among Criminals.

MEETINGS are regularly conducted by permission of the authorities in many jails and penitentiaries, resulting in the conversion of many of the convicts. Upon their release from prison hundreds of ex-prisoners are assisted to find work and to return to the paths of honesty. Money is urgently needed to establish some regular Home for ex-criminals, similar to those which exist in other countries, through which 1,626 ex-convicts passed last year, resulting in about 80 per cent. proving to be satisfactory cases.

Our Work
Children.

THE SERVICES of The Salvation Army have a special attraction for children. Whatever may be the opinion of the grown-ups as to the wisdom of our methods, there can be no doubt of their popularity amongst the young. Whether it be in the open air or in our halls, there is seldom any difficulty in arresting and retaining the attention of the children. This branch of our work has of recent years been carefully systematized and extended with the most encouraging results.

Perhaps the most interesting development has been the establishment of Brigades of Corps Cadets, consisting of boys and girls between the ages of twelve and eighteen who profess conversion and desire to be trained, with the consent of their parents, as future Salvation Army officers. The movement was started some two years ago in England and already numbers over 4,000 in that country. In America it was commenced at the early part of this year and now numbers about 400 members. The Cadets receive examination papers at regular intervals and are graded from time to time, besides being encouraged to go through a course of reading and assisting in the general corps work.

At the usual Junior meetings all the children are divided up into suitable classes and are carefully instructed in the Bible. A weekly meeting of what is termed the Band of Love arranges for the instruction of the children in various departments of useful knowledge.

A special book has been prepared by the Army for instruction in club drills, tambourine drills, flag drills, Chinese lantern drills, etc., accompanied with music and singing. These are extremely popular with the children. For the guidance of parents General Booth has written a valuable book on the training of children, and a special catechism suitable for them is now in the press.

In India, where only a small percentage of the population can read or write, the Army operates an extensive system of public schools, in which thousands of Hindoo children are educated. In a country like America this would, of course, be neither necessary nor advisable, and the fact is only mentioned to call attention to the spirit of adaptation which characterizes the Army work in all lands.

The Army, however, operates two very interesting Orphanages in the United States—one at Rutherford, near New York, and the other near San Francisco. It is hoped at an early date to greatly extend these operations, locating the children, as they grow up, on our various Farm Colonies, and thereby making them ultimately home owners.

Metropolises for Clerks and Artisans.

THE YOUNG MEN of our cities are surrounded with pitfalls and temptations. The honest young clerk or storeman struggling to keep up appearances on the small salary he receives, is liable to get amongst bad companions unless surrounded with a good, healthy, moral environment. Already several institutions of this character have been established, and there is a wide field for further advance. We shall be glad to hear from friends interested in this class of work and willing to invest some money in it, holding ourselves responsible for the regular payment of interest and the gradual repayment of the capital.

Our Work among Young Women Employed in Stores & Offices.

THE LOW WAGES paid to the thousands of young women employed in our large city stores is making it yearly more difficult for them to subsist. Homes, Hotels and Boarding Houses for respectable young women are being established to supply this urgent need at the earnest request of our friends and with their hearty backing.

Needless to say that in these Homes only women of thoroughly respectable character are received, and that they are run entirely distinct from our Rescue Homes. Owing to the fear that the one may be mistaken for the other we have sometimes found a difficulty in launching these institutions, but the early prejudice quickly disappears, and as soon as the Home is known it is usually crowded with a bright, intelligent class of young women who deeply appreciate the advantages and opportunities placed within their reach, many of them co-operating heartily with us in our plans for the betterment of others.

Farm Colonies. THE most alarming feature of our modern civilization is its wholesale disregard for and disruption of the family. Domicide is to the nation what suicide is to the individual. It is as false economy for society to destroy the home as it is for a man to blow out his brains so as to save the expense of feeding his body! And yet almost all modern pauperology is based upon the destruction of family ties. The consequences have been most disastrous and are bound to be increasingly so as time goes on.

Our cities are crowded with poor families who are reduced to the verge of starvation. The single man and single woman without any family responsibilities have a sufficiently hard struggle for existence. But their condition is as Paradise compared with that of the starving family.

"I have three brothers," remarked one of our Bowery boys, "but only one of them is living; the other two are married!" And yet beneath the jest what a pathetic world of suffering was hidden.

A very large proportion of these families have drifted from the country to the city from causes over which they have but little control. To return to the country other than as mere laborers is almost impossible. They have no capital with which to buy land or build homes or support their families till their crops are gathered. Moreover, in the cities they have always charity to fall back upon when their own resources fail. And yet there is no reason why the same charity which at present keeps them in the city at so enormous and unprofitable an outlay of capital should not bend its energies to removing them to the country and establishing them in cottage homes, of which they should become the owners.

It is now two years since our proposal for Farm Colonies was made public. During this period we have, though greatly crippled by the lack of capital, established three Colonies—one in Colorado, another in California, and a third in Ohio. The first of these is the most important, since upon it we have concentrated the bulk of our available capital, but the possibilities within reach of the other Colonies are almost equally great if the necessary funds should be forthcoming.

Each Colony consists of a tract of land divided up into small homestead farms with a cottage, from five to ten acres of land, a few cows, and some pigs and poultry. The colonist is assisted to get on to his feet, but has to repay all the money expended upon him, the amount being either repaid to the lender or reinvested in establishing another family.

On our Colorado Colony we have now about 150 men, women and children. With an outlay of about $30,000 we have been enabled to pay the first two instalments on the land, erect some twenty-seven cottages with outhouses of various descriptions, purchase about 150 cows, 75 horses, 120 pigs and 1,075 poultry, besides buying machinery, erecting a creamery and supporting the families of the colonists.

At the end of eighteen months what is the position of the Colony? Each family is able to meet its own expenses and has an excellent prospect of speedily repaying the few hundred dollars expended upon its establishment. The canteloupe crop has brought in a cash income of over $1,000, while the creamery brings a regular weekly income of about $50 to $60—say $2,500 a year. In addition to this is a considerable further income, which may be valued at not less than $1,000, from other vegetable produce and from poultry and eggs, pigs, etc. Large quantities of hay, alfalfa, corn and other produce for home consumption have also been grown by the colonists. Here, then, is a cash income of not less than $5,000 on an investment of $30,000, and this during the second year of the Colony's existence. Apart from this, moreover, is the great increase in the value of the land thus thickly peopled and intelligently cultivated. Unimproved land around our Colony has already increased from $22.50 to $50 an acre in selling value. The main line of the Santa Fe Railroad intersects our land, which is irrigated by one of the best canals in the valley of the Arkansas River, while we are able to obtain an abundant supply of water for drinking purposes within a few feet of the surface of our land.

Central Food and Shelter Depot, Boston, Mass.

Washington's Hotel and Hall, Philadelphia, Pa.

Here, then, in our Colony system is a plan whereby the surplus population of our great cities may be removed in families by tens of thousands and converted from being the recipients of charity into self-respecting home owners. Doubtless the battle cry of the philanthropist and statesman in the near future will be, "The landless man to the manless land!" In other words, let the waste labor be placed upon the waste land by means of the waste capital and we shall thereby transform this trinity of modern waste into a unity of production.

For instance, let it be supposed that the $50,000,000 now consumed by our 3,000,000 submerged poor in our cities should be devoted to removing them on the above plan from the cities and placing them in homes of their own, what would be the result?

With this amount 500,000 persons could be taken in families from the cities each year and placed upon 1,000,000 acres of fertile land in cottages of which they would ultimately become the owners.

Within ten years the whole of this capital outlay would be refunded by them (interest having been paid on it in the meanwhile) and would be available for repeating the process until the balance between town and country had been restored. The natural increment of the land thus thickly populated would be an absolute security for the investment apart altogether from the industry of its occupants and the results of their labor, which would at least be abundantly sufficient to supply them with a living without their being dependent on the State or on private charity.

The relief thus afforded to the present strain upon taxes and philanthropy would be difficult to overestimate, while the self-supporting and self-respecting citizens thus created would enormously increase the home demand for the products of our great cities.

Few features of our philanthropic work afford a more interesting subject for the study and assistance of the benevolent than do these our Farm Colonies.

THE VAST NETWORK of spiritual and benevolent agencies established by the Army in the United States necessarily involves a heavy outlay of expenditure. This would not be possible but for the fact that each institution is placed upon a self-supporting basis and is taught to be responsible for its own expenses. Not only so, but each officer and soldier is trained to assist liberally according to his ability both in the support and extension of other branches of the work.

The main sources of income are the collections which are taken up at all meetings, both indoors and in the open air; the donations of friends of the movement, and the profits on the sale of "War Crys," books and uniform.

Officers are only granted a small salary sufficient to enable them to live in a strictly economical manner. They are, moreover, expected to meet their rent, gas, fuel and other liabilities before being entitled to draw their salary. At the same time, to supply their personal need, several funds have been established.

- (a) The Sick and Wounded Fund provides two Homes of Rest, one near New York and the other in California, besides contributing towards the medical and resting expenses of officers.
- (b) The Disabled Officers' Fund provides a regular weekly grant for officers who have been permanently disabled through disease or other cause.
- (c) The Funeral Fund provides for the burial expenses of officers and their children.

To the above a fourth fund has now been added, known as the Officers' Dime Benefit League. Each officer will contribute ten cents on the death of a comrade officer, the amount thus raised being paid to the heirs or dependents of the deceased, or to such object as he may designate. The League includes two classes of members—beneficiary and non-beneficiary. The former will be restricted to officers, the latter will consist of friends and soldiers desiring to join the League. The maximum amount payable will be limited to $500, any surplus being credited to the fund, and, in case of accumulation, being paid over to the Disabled Officers' Fund.

Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Control Administration Building, San Francisco, Cal.

It is needless to add that money is urgently needed for the extension of the various branches of our work here described. The opportunities that surround us are limited only by the fact that advances are dependent upon the necessary capital being forthcoming. Once established, the majority of our institutions are strictly self-supporting and find little difficulty in paying their way.

Regular balance sheets are published annually by the National Headquarters, while the accounts of every corps and institution throughout the country are carefully and systematically kept on forms specially provided for the purpose.

Nor are the funds administered without the most careful supervision and control of our ablest and most devoted officers, under the direction of regularly constituted councils.

The Board of Trustees established by the Act of Incorporation is responsible for the general administration of the funds and properties of the Army in the United States. The By-Laws drawn up under the Act further arrange for the establishment of a General Finance Council and a Property Council, each consisting of not less than six officers, who supervise the various details. Careful minutes of the proceedings are kept, and an annual return made to the Secretary of State, in addition to the publication of an annual report and balance sheet.

Further particulars may be obtained from Commander Booth Tucker or from the Legal Secretary, National Headquarters, 122 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.

How to Help
The Salvation Army.

- I. By taking a Mercy Box in your home and putting into it one cent a week for the poor.
- II. By becoming a Mercy-Box Secretary and getting others to take a Box.
- III. By helping us to place our Merchants' League Box in stores, restaurants and offices.
- IV. By joining the Auxiliary League and subscribing five dollars a year (payable, if preferred, quarterly), when we will send you regularly one of our publications.
- V. By loaning to our Colony or Building Fund any money you may have laid by, when we will give you good security and interest, and you will realize that your money is doing good, besides being safely invested.
- VI. By representing our work to moneyed friends and urging them to assist us while living and to remember our work in their wills.
- VII. By reading and circulating our literature.
- VIII. By praying for us.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS.

THE various branches of the work described in this book are in urgent need of financial assistance, principally for purposes of extension rather than maintenance. Loans or donations for the Farm Colonies would be especially helpful. Shelters, Salvage Brigades, Children's Homes, Work among Prisoners, Rescue Homes, Slum Work and other operations ought to be greatly enlarged to cope with the necessities of the poor. Commander and Consul Booth Tucker will be glad to answer any inquiries and furnish further information. Checks should be made payable to The Salvation Army, Incorporated. Letters should be addressed 120-124 W. 14th St., N. Y. City.

BALANCE SHEETS

The Salvation Army.

NOTE.—The accounts as published herewith embrace only those funds which are handled and dealt with directly at the National Headquarters in New York City, and do not include contributions or disbursements of any of our 700 local stations, nor accounts in connection with any charitable or social work outside of New York City and the immediate neighborhood. Balance sheets are issued locally giving these particulars. The only exception to this is the Farm Colony accounts. The balance sheet for the half year ending September 30, 1899, has been added to those of the previous year, owing to the change of date in our financial year consequent upon the incorporation.
